Cindy

My mom is amazing because she is everything I aspire to be someday. My mom is smart, courageous, strong, funny, loving, and caring. She devotes so much of her time to me and my two brothers that it is truly unbelievable. She has gone through so many good and bad times with my family and stuck through us all no matter what – always holding us together. When my oldest brother suffered a spinal cord injury and was paralyzed, she not only spent every day and night by his hospital bed but also by my side, as I was a confused and scared fourth grader. Without her I don't know how my family would have made it through that tragedy. She is not only there for the bad times, but also for all of the good times – spending much of her very rare free time with me doing special mother-daughter activities such as going for a hike, taking me out to lunch, or spending a night in together watching a movie and playing scrabble. She is also one of the most supportive people I have ever met. I have decided to move to Montana next year, and being her only daughter, she will miss me yet she wants to go for my dreams. She encourages me every day to live my life to the fullest and meet every challenge I come to. My mom would never hold me back. My mom is truly everything to me and I have no idea where I would be or what kind of person I would be without her. I thank my lucky stars everyday for blessing me with such an amazing mother, there is no one I could ever love more.
